4th Grade News

This week we were a testing machine. On Tuesday we took our first NWEA Test, on Wednesday we took our first Math test, Thursday we took our first Science test, and on Friday we took our weekly Reading and English tests. We did fabulous in all of them!!!

We are getting pretty good at place value in math, so we moved on to working with decimals. We are learning up to the thousandths as of right now, and we are also learning how to order and round them.

This week we also had our first mass and we did our parts proudly. A BIG SHOUT OUT to those that could join us. Thank you!

Listening to our reading Selection

In Reading this week, we read a story about a little girl, making a promise to a horn toad which she did not know was a prince. They made a deal and she had to follow through with it, and in the end she was on the wrong end of the bargain. The horn toad was turned back into a Prince and left her home to think about what she had promised. Because we read a story about animals and plants in the Southwest, we decided to do a little research project on some different species. We are then going to make a brochure.

Next week we are going to be taking two more NWEA tests, and be visiting the Fire Hall for Fire Prevention Week. Please look for a permission slip coming home, sign and return it on Monday.

Have a great weekend!
